

Dick Lauer

Dick has had a deep appreciation for the outdoors throughout his life. Originally from a small rural town in Indiana, he fell in love with the Flathead Valley after visiting in the late 1990's. He enjoys fishing, hiking, kayaking, skiing and golf.

Dick graduated from Dartmouth University with a degree in economics and attended the University of Washington Masters Program. He joined the FTBT board in 2016 and has been a regular on the trails for several years. Dick is a retired USAF pilot in addition to being retired from his marine industry Portland, Oregon-based job. He lives with his wife less than a mile from the trails.

"I wake up every morning feeling so grateful to live in the most beautiful place in the world. I look forward to being a part of preserving the Foy's to Blacktail Trails for generations to come."
